A Life of Service

Mike Edington was born in the United Kingdom in 1963. He joined the police force in 1985 and quickly rose through the ranks. In 2006, he was seconded to the United Kingdom Human Trafficking Centre, where he worked on some of the most high-profile human trafficking cases in the country.

In 2010, Edington left the police force to set up his own anti-trafficking organization, the A21 Campaign. The A21 Campaign is a global organization that works to combat human trafficking and modern-day slavery. The organization provides training to law enforcement and other frontline responders, and it operates safe houses and shelters for victims of trafficking.

Fighting Human Trafficking

Human trafficking is a global problem that affects millions of people every year. Traffickers lure victims with false promises of jobs or a better life, but once they are in their control, they are forced to work in slave-like conditions. Victims of trafficking may be forced to work in factories, fields, or brothels. They may be beaten, tortured, or even killed.

Edington has dedicated his life to fighting human trafficking. He has traveled the world, rescuing victims and bringing traffickers to justice. He has worked with law enforcement agencies in over 50 countries, and he has helped to develop new strategies to combat trafficking.

In 2014, Edington was awarded the George Medal for his work in fighting human trafficking. The George Medal is one of the highest awards for gallantry that can be awarded to a British citizen.

A Story of Hope

Mike Edington's story is one of courage, compassion, and hope. He has dedicated his life to fighting one of the most heinous crimes in the world. He has rescued victims from slavery, and he has brought traffickers to justice. His work has made a real difference in the lives of countless people.

Edington's story is also a story of hope. He shows us that even in the face of such evil, there is hope. We can make a difference in the world, and we can help to end human trafficking.

How You Can Help

There are many ways that you can help to fight human trafficking. You can donate to organizations that are working to combat trafficking, such as the A21 Campaign. You can also volunteer your time to help victims of trafficking. And you can educate yourself about the issue of trafficking and spread the word to others.

Together, we can make a difference. We can end human trafficking and create a world where everyone is free.
