In the spring of 2020, as the world was gripped by the Covid-19 pandemic and lockdowns forced us into isolation, singer-songwriter David Plumbley found himself with an abundance of time and a heart full of emotions. He channeled those feelings into a series of songs that would become his album, Songs From Quarantine.

The album is a poignant and evocative musical reflection on the lockdown experience, capturing the fear, uncertainty, and isolation, but also the hope, resilience, and community that emerged during that challenging time.

The songs are simple and unadorned, featuring Plumbley's warm vocals and acoustic guitar. But their simplicity is their strength, allowing the lyrics to shine through with their raw emotion and honesty.

The album opens with the title track, a haunting ballad that sets the tone for the rest of the album. Plumbley sings of the empty streets and the eerie silence that descended upon the world during lockdown. But even in the midst of the darkness, he finds a glimmer of hope.

*In the stillness of these empty streets
I hear a distant drumbeat
It's the sound of hope, it's the sound of life
And it's calling me to fight*

Throughout the album, Plumbley explores the different emotions of lockdown. In "Isolation," he captures the loneliness and despair that many felt during that time. But even in the depths of his isolation, he finds solace in the simple things, like the sound of birds singing outside his window.

*In the silence of my isolation
I hear the birds singing their song
It's a reminder that life goes on
And that hope will never be gone*

But Songs From Quarantine is not all about darkness and despair. Plumbley also finds moments of joy and hope, even in the midst of the pandemic. In "Community," he celebrates the human spirit and the way that we come together in times of crisis.

*In the face of adversity
We stand together, side by side
We are a community, we are strong
And we will get through this, together*

Songs From Quarantine is a powerful and moving album that captures the spirit of the Covid-19 lockdown. It is a testament to the human spirit and our ability to find hope and resilience even in the darkest of times.
