High in the sky, there was a bright and shining object. It was shaped like a star, but it was much larger than any star that Anya had ever seen before. Anya watched in amazement as the object slowly fell from the sky. It fell closer and closer, until it landed in the forest just a few feet away from Anya.

Anya cautiously approached the object. As she got closer, she could see that it was a strange and beautiful creature. It was made of pure light, and it glowed with a gentle radiance. The creature had large, almond-shaped eyes, and its skin was as smooth and white as porcelain. It was the most beautiful thing that Anya had ever seen.

The creature looked at Anya with its large, almond-shaped eyes. It didn't speak, but Anya could somehow understand what it was thinking. The creature was lost and scared. It had fallen from its home in the stars, and it didn't know how to get back.

Anya felt sorry for the creature. She knew what it was like to be lost and scared. She had once gotten lost in the forest herself, and she had been so frightened. Anya decided to help the creature. She took its hand and led it back to her village.

The villagers were amazed when they saw the creature. They had never seen anything like it before. They welcomed the creature into their village and gave it food and shelter. The creature stayed with the villagers for many months, and it became a beloved member of the community.

One day, the creature told Anya that it was time for it to go home. It had learned how to get back to its home in the stars, and it was eager to return. Anya was sad to see the creature go, but she knew that it was time for it to return to its own world.

Anya helped the creature build a spaceship, and then she watched as it flew away into the sky. Anya waved goodbye to the creature, and then she turned and walked back to her village. She knew that she would never forget the creature, and she would always be grateful for the friendship that they had shared.

The end.
